Alleged Killer Out On $10,000 Posted as Bail

Antone Anderson, Slayer Of Curry and Blake, To Be Tried Here

Antone Anderson, accused slayer of former game warden Jack Burke of this county and Warden Allen Curry of San Francisco, was released from the custody of the San Francisco police on Wednesday when he posted $7000 cash bail and $3000 property bond

Anderson, who is still confined to the St. Francis hospital in San Francisco as the result of wounds received in the fight in which the two officers were killed, has been under guard of the police of San Francisco since charges of murder were filed against him. He will be tried in this county for shooting the two men as soon as he has sufficiently recovered to come to court

The two men were supposed to have been shot in a gun duel on Anderson's boat off the shore near Burlingame When, however, the San Francisco authorities announced their intention of invoking an old statute which provides that a crime committed aboard a boat may be tried in any county through which the boat has passed on the trip during which the crime was committed, District Attorney Swart announced that he would co-operate with the San Francisco authorities in the case.

The action of the San Francisco grand jury, however, left the matter rather up in the air, and until the announcement by District Attorney Swart that he would bring action here, it was not known where Anderson would be tried

Anderson charges that he shot the two men in self defense after they had drawn guns and shot him. The fight is said to have started when Burke and Curry tried to confiscate Anderson's net and make him put in at South San Francisco. Anderson claims that he said he would put in at fisherman's wharf in San Francisco, but not at South San Francisco.

Pioneer Physician Succumbs to Heart Attack Yesterday

Dr. J. L. Ross, pioneer physician of this city, passed away yesterday afternoon at the Palo Alto hospital, where he was taken earlier in the day following a heart attack. Dr. Ross appeared to be improving nicely early yesterday afternoon at the hospital, but a return of the heart trouble later in the day proved fatal to him.

Dr. Ross was one of the best-known physicians of the county, and in many instances had been the family physician to three and four generations of Redwood City people. He was born in Illinois and was educated in the Rush Medical College. He came to California when just out of college and began the practice of medicine at Mayfield, but shortly after came to Redwood City, locating here in 1881.

In his business here he was for many years in partnership with the late Dr. W. M. Barrett, and these two for many years served all the needs of Redwood City for medical attention.

Dr. Ross is survived by his wife, Mrs. Blanche Ross, and by a son, Joseph L Ross, Jr., and two daughters, Miss Sarah Ross, a well-known educator, who is now in the east and by Mrs. Edward Grenfell of this city. Another son, Dr. Harvey Ross, passed away in Honolulu some time ago, after practicing medicine in the Hawiian Islands for many years. Dr. Ross was a brother of the late George C. Ross, for many years one of the leading attorneys of this county; and was an uncle of Lee T and Hall C. Ross of the law firm of Ross & Ross of this city; and of Dr. Donald Ross of San Jose.

Dr. Ross was one of the first stockholders and for many years president of the San Mateo County Bank. He was still a director of that institution.

TWO TO TRY FOR SEAT IN STATE ASSEMBLY

Harry Parkman Files Nomination Papers; Mrs McGinn Makes Announcement of Intention to Seek Office

Harry Parkman, assemblman for this district, filed his nomination papers with County Clerk Elizabetn M. Kneese this week. He will be a candidate at the coming primary election to succeed himself to the office which he has held for the past two terms. Two weeks ago when Parkman made his first announcement of intention to run again for election this year, he said in part:

"So many of my friends have urged me to again become a candidate for the Assembly that I have decided to do so, and shall therefore file within the next few days.

"Reappointment of the Senate and Assembly districts this year presents so many problems that are serious to the taxpayers, and in fact to all citizens whether they are property owners or not, that I feel that the interests of my home county can best be served by a man who has had experience in Legislative procedure.

"Under reappointment the Assembly will be dominated by the larger centers of population, while the "Cow Counties" or agricultural districts will control the Senate. The re-alignment of boundary lines and the number of assemblymen who will be dropped out or who will run for the Senate, or other offices, will result in at least one-half of the Assembly being new, inexperienced legislators.

"My friends feel therefore that it is very important to San Mateo county to have a representative who knows how to do things, and who is known by the "old-timers" and the officials whose friendship and confidence means so much to a lawmaker who is trying to get results for his constituents .

"When I first went to Sacramento as an Assemblyman I soon found out that experience and lack of acquaintance were serious handicaps, but in my second session I was given some of the important committees, where bills of importance to our development are considered

"I was appointed chairman of reapportionment, which might have been very important to San Mateo county had Congressional reapportionment been considered, or had there been much controversy over State re-alignment. The problems of Congressional reappointment will come up in the 1931 session.

"I was appointed also to Ways and Means, which is one of the most important committees; Commerce and Navigation, which is most vital to San Francisco and San Mateo counties; Fish and Game, which considers all bills affecting not alone sportsmen, but also the tremendous fishing and canning business in California.

"Banking, County Government, Public Morals and Medical and Dental laws were my other committees.

"The longer a man serves the better his committees and San Mateo county deserves representation on the best.

"After my first session I decided that there were entirely too many bills introduced and that a legislator should confine himself to such bills as are considered necessary, by the large majority of the people he represents, for the sound development of this district.

"It is a tremendous task and responsibility to analize and vote intelligently upon two thousand or more bills, but I tried earnestly and honestly to give every person or interest affected a fair hearing and a square deal, keeping in mind at all times the best interests of San Mateo county, California, and the Nation.

"This I pledge myself to again do, if re-elected as the representative of Assembly District No. 19 at the primary election to be held on August 26, 1930."

Opposing Parkman in his campaign for the assembly will be Mrs. Elsa McGinn, prominent club woman of San Mateo, who was also a candidate against Parkman four years ago.

Mrs. McGinn has been very active in the civic and social life of San Mateo. She served on the city council of San Mateo for four years and during her year as park commissioner was largely instrumental in carrying on the successful campaign for the purchase of the Kohl property for the city park. During three years of her term on the council she acted as police and fire commissioner.

President of the Woman's Club of San Mateo for many years, Mrs. McGinn headed the movement which resulted in the building of the new clubhouse on El Camino Real and has continued her leadership in the club as a director and tireless worker ever since. Mrs. McGinn served as chairman of the Women's Council of Defense and of the Women's Liberty Loan Campaign committees during the war. She was also active in Red Cross work and in aiding the returning veterans to become re-established.

Mrs. McGinn has served as president of the San Mateo County Federation of Women's Clubs and as a member of the executive board of the San Francisco district federation.

King Solomon Could Not Have Done Better

Bernice Fischer some time ago brought an action in the superior court asking that the divorce decree secured from Richard Fischer be modified so that she would get an increase from $150 to $225 a month for the support of her two boys and a girl, whose custody she secured with the decree of divorce. In hearing the case on Thursday, Judge Buck used the wisdom of Solomon in the settlement of the suit. Much bitterness was shown in the taking of testimony by the parties. When the excitement was at its height the judge gravely suggested that the father may be given the custody of the two sons so in that way relieve the mother of further burdens. The effect of the suggestion could be seen at once upon the fond mother. Mother love is certain to prevail in the case and sooner than lose her boys Mrs. Fischer will most likely drop the action. Attorney Joseph Fitzpatrick apepared for Mrs. Fischer.

Thompson To Run For Supervisor Of Fifth Township

Secures Nomination Papers At Clerk's Office Here Yesterday

The securing of nomination blanks from the county clerk's office yesterday afternoon by Supervisor Thompson of the Fifth township is considered as an indication that he will seek re-election to office in spite of the fact that proceedings to combine that township with the present Fourth township are now under way.

Thompson's action is considered as indicative that he has confidence that the elimination of the present Fifth township as a political subdivision of the county will not be consumated by the board, or at least that the redistricting of the county will be delayed for some time.

Sheriff "Jim" To Enter Race For Re-election

McGrath To Seek Election To Succeed Himself In Office

Sheriff James J. McGrath on Wednesday made the announcement of his candidacy for re-election to the position which he now fills In making the announcement of his intention to enter the coming campaign, Sheriff McGrath said:

"At the primaries August 26, I am respectfully asking the voters of San Mateo County to express their confidence in my integrity and my administration as sheriff by returning me to the office.

"It was my fortune to be chosen sheriff after the untimely death of my able predecessor, Thomas C. "Brick" McGovern, who had built up a very capable organization. Disaster, however, robbed me of two of my most efficient deputies a few months after I took office. Consequently I was called upon to fill this gap in such a manner as would assure continued success and confidence in the office.

"In meeting this difficult task my life-long residence in San Mateo county, my wide acquaintance with the people here and my knowledge of local conditions served me in good stead. The organization was again completed, and in my three and one half years as sheriff has, I think you will agree, served well.

"We enjoy the absolute confidence and esteem of every police department in California and especially those of the peninsula, including San Francisco. We have a criminal identification bureau by comparison second to none, and an investigation bureau that has proven most efficient.

Records will show that San Mateo county has been singularly free of crime in the past few years, and what crime has occured has been dealt with quickly, effectively and humanely. We have, in doing this, I believe, had our part in making the county attractive to new industry and commerce, thus aiding materially in the progress and general development which, the 1930 census reveals, has placed San Mateo county first in California in progressiveness.

"We are engaged now, and have partially completed a comprehensive library of criminology which, when ready, will prove invaluable in the solution of crime and the apprehension of criminals. A change of administration now would greatly retard this work, so urgently needed by able investigators of my staff, who are helping to compile it.

The civil department of the sheriff's office has long enjoyed a reputation for efficiency and tact in dealing with business houses and individuals of the county. This phase of the office is most important to county business and finance and has been developed rapidly to meet the ever increasing demands made upon it.

"It is my greatest ambition to serve this county to the utmost of my ability, particularly since it always has been and always will be home to me, and the goodwill and confidence of my neighbors is a source of personal pride.

"Your co-operation at the primaries August 26th will continue my earnest endeavor to keep this a municipality where homes, honest industry and wholesome sport may thrive in security."

J. W. Motley, Visalia cafe owner, is firmly convinced someone who knew him rather personally robbed his house of $90 in cash recently. "I'm not a squealer." Pain-racked in the San Quentin prison hospital, Ted War, a convict, remained true to the same convict code which prevented fellow convicts from naming War's assailant. The man crumpled to the ground recently while standing in line waiting for dinner. He had been stabbed by a fellow prisoner, but by whom or why the prison authorities could not learn despite exhaustive questioning of convicts near the wounded man. He is 28, and serving a four-year sentence from Fresno for second degree burglary. Dr. Leo L. Stanley, prison physician, said War probably would recover.

San Francisco's Chamber of Commerce has endorsed the proposal to improve existing thoroughfares from Stockton to Halfmoon Bay via the San Mateo-Hayward bridge. Frederick H. Meyer, chairman of the chamber's highway committee, said: "This new routing would form a very important connecting route from the San Joaquin Valley to the peninsula and would constitute a lateral which, no doubt, would carry a tremendous volume of traffic." The routing would involve a definite road to the bridge from which connections would be made to the Bayshore highway, El Camino Real, Skyline boulevard and the new Shoreline highway, now under construction.

The trouble with educating missionaries in California is the difficulty in prying them away from California. So Dr. P. T. Magan, head of the College of Medical Evangelists at San Bernardino, told 12,000 delegates to the Seventh Day Adventist international convention recently at San Francisco. "If the fathers of our faith had clung to New England as some of the graduates of our school cling to California, we would never have spread our message to the world," he declared. Less than one-third of the graduates go into denominational work, he said. The College of Medical Evangelists now enjoys the largest foundation for medical research on the Pacific Coast, Doctor Magan stated. That is the $2,000,000 contributed by W. K. Oregon Akers, 78 years of age, who crossed the plains to California by ox cart in 1855 and was one of Kern's oldest and most picturesque pioneers, committed suicide today at his ranch home in the Buena Vista district. He had been in ill health since the death of his wife three years ago and lately had been despondent. Telling his nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. W. V. Akers, that he was going for a walk he disappeared and a short time later was found dead in a barn. He had hanged himself with a rope stretched from a rafter. Akers had lived in Kern county more than five decades, most of which time was spent on the old Buena Vista ranch. In 1875 he was commissioned to haul the first municipal flagpole to Bakersfield. Taking sixteen mules and two huge wagons he journeyed to Sequoia Forest where he obtained a giant redwood. The trip required several weeks. The flagpole was placed on the corner of Nineteenth street and Chester avenue where it now stands.

Johnson has spent years in search of the mine without success.

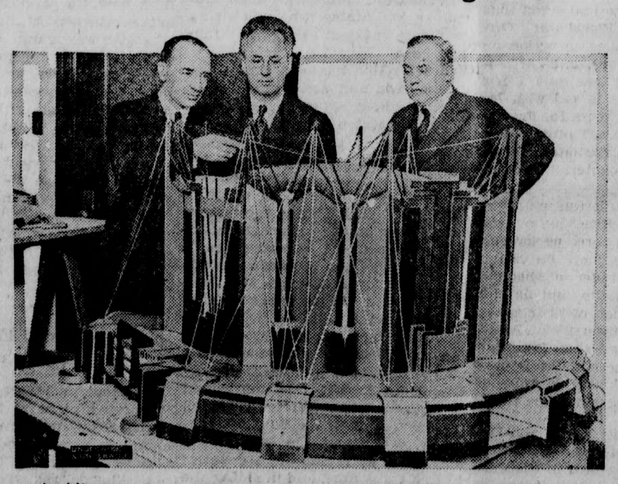
Two rifle championships in the same family is the unusual record that has been achieved by Samuel A. McKone and his seventeen-year-old son, Samuel A. McKone, Jr. A few hours after the elder McKone had won the senior championship of the Kansas State Rifle association at Junction City, his son won the junior championship. The father's score was 243 out of a possible 250, while the son's was 193 out of a possible 200.

Odd Architecture for Chicago Fair



Architecture for the Century of Progress exposition in Chicago is going to be decidedly different from any that has ever been used. For example, this photograph of the model of one of the domes of the Travel and Transport building shows how cables on the outside will do away with the necessity of having pillars and posts on the inside. The men inspecting the model are Manager L. R. Lohr, Assistant Director of Works C. W. Farrier and Secretary Daniel H. Burnham.

CUPID PLAYS SOME CLEVER TRICKS

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

BETH MORAN loved her job better than anything else in the whole wide world. Maybe that sounds selfish but Beth had studied, toiled, sacrificed to get that job and she meant to keep it as long as she could. Not many young women of Beth's age were earning $70 per week. She had a tiny apartment which her Aunt Mary kept spic and span. No man living could ever be to her what her job was.

One afternoon when Beth came home from work she found a package on the living room table. Aunt Mary said a messenger had delivered it. She removed the wrapping paper and found a plain white box. Within the plain white box was an elaborate box bearing the name of an expensive brand of confections. A card lay on top. Upon the card was scribbled these words: "Every time you eat one of these think of me." No name.

"Who sent all that candy?" demanded Aunt Mary, looking over Beth's slim shoulder.

"Haven't an idea. Help yourself, auntie. There's plenty—three pounds."

Next morning Beth glanced from her desk to the desks of her fellow workers. Some were married, one at least engaged. Of the five remaining men it couldn't be Mr. Lowe. Or Edson Moffat. Or John Hess. It might be Jerome Warren. It might be Amos Wells. She hoped it was neither Warren nor Wells. Conjecture got her nowhere.

That afternoon she found another gift on the living room table. A florist's box. It contained pink roses. And this nameless message: "When you look at these think of me."

"Somebody's after you," remarked Aunt Mary.

"I wish you wouldn't say that!" flared Beth. "I think the man's a nut. Or else he's ashamed to let me know who he is." But she couldn't take her eyes from the lovely roses. "No man's going to make me give up my job for the sake of having Mrs. on my tombstone."

"Of course," mused Aunt Mary. "times have changed since my day. But I still believe it's a lot better for a girl to marry and raise a family than to be tied down to an office desk till her youth and beauty are past. I was seventeen when I married Tim. We lived together for forty years. Our children are all grown up and married. I'm free to look after you. But my dear, I can't stay forever. I didn't come here with that understanding."

Beth bit her lip.

"You don't seem to realize, Aunt Mary, that I am modern to the core. A business woman first, last and always. Aunt Mary, I've fought and all but starved to get my present position. My job has cost me too much for me to give it up for—for that precious little thing called love," she ended mockingly.

The third day Beth received from her nameless pursuer a beautiful framed colored photograph of a beauty spot in the Pocono hills. "Wish you were here with me," was the message.

The fourth day. A lovely, quaint bit of jewelry.

"I picked up this amethyst for you," accompanied the gift.

The fifth day. A book of poems bound in hand-tooled leather. "Read the lines I have marked," she was bidden. Each line contained a direct appeal to her heart. She shut the book, her cheeks flaming.

It was maddeningly mysterious. She felt baffled. Next night she raced upstairs. Her heart throbbed wildly as she opened the living room door. Expectantly, eagerly her eyes sought the living room table. A large gift this time. A basket of fruit. The seventh day she received another box of candy.

Expectancy had become such a habit with her that on the eighth day when she found nothing she nearly suffered a collapse. When she looked in her mirror she found that she was pale. Her chin wanted to quiver. "Fool!" she muttered.

A week passed. A feeling of disappointment, of depression weighed upon Beth.

She lagged upstairs one afternoon. Nothing to look forward to any more. On the table was a box. Beth pounced upon it. Her hands trembled, her eyes were dim as she lifted the cover and saw the red roses.

Next day three men were absent from their desks. Vacation had begun. Late that afternoon a telegram was laid before Beth. It was from him. It came from a distant point. Thereafter she received a telegram each day for ten days. Each message was distinctive. But they gave no clew to the sender. Beth kept them all in a neat bundle.

Aunt Mary was lying down the following Sunday afternoon. Beth sat reading. The telephone rang. She leaped to it. A man's voice, deep, pleasant, came to her ears.

"Beth! I just got back. Get my wires?"

"Yes!" The word was propelled from her lips by her intense surprise.

"I'm coming to take you for a ride. In about twenty minutes. Can you go?"

Again faintly, "Yes!"

She hooked up the receiver and sank back on the davenport. Who was he? She hadn't recognized his voice. What was she letting herself in for?

Twenty minutes passed. He was at the door. She hesitated to open it. A tall man smiled down at her with clear blue eyes. An exceedingly good looking, virile young man. Mac Halway, advertising manager of her own firm.

"Well, Beth, here I am. Ready to explain everything."

Beth stiffened. Her lips set in a hard line.

"You seem to have been having a very good time at my expense," she said coolly. "But—I don't go riding with married men!"

"Beth! I'm not married. Where'd you get that idea? I've never even wanted to get married till I found you. You treated me rough. Three separate times you refused to have lunch with me. Doggone it, Beth! You had me feazed till I thought of a new way to approach you."

"I see. You advertised. You created interest, illusion, suspense in your prospect." Beth's eyes were beginning to relent.

"That's it exactly. But don't be hard on me, Beth. I bought a ring while I was away. I can't take it back. Can I, huh?" His blue eyes pleaded.

A flush, a smile, made Beth bewitching. Her firm, fixed notions of economic independence floated away like thistledown upon her sigh.

"Who wants you to?" she murmured.

Paper Stage Scenery

One of the difficulties in the way of producing elaborate theatrical pieces at popular prices is the high cost of scenery for the stage. A theater in Geneva, Switzerland, is trying to solve this difficulty by using scenery composed of paper instead of the more expensive materials generally employed for that purpose. By using this method of making scenery a musical revue was recently produced for less than $100. The paper scenery is made practically fireproof by putting it through a chemical process. Those who invented the new type of scenery say that the bright colors of paper, together with its possible transparency, make that material very desirable for use in theaters, especially the more elaborate productions. — Pathfinder Magazine.

So Different

Herbert Corey claims that men and women who sell fiction and poetry now look like prosperous business folk. Once upon a time the authoress might be identified by a strained look in her eye and a wisp of hair back of the right ear. Now she is bobbed, short-skirted, rouged and lip-sticked. Robert Edeson's quip about a writing star and his slightly less stellar wife would not pass now. He saw the pair lurking in a corner at a reception:

"They look," said he, "as though they had moved all the coal out of the bath-tub—and then didn't do it, after all."

Make Minutes Count

The old familiar example of Elihu Burritt, who mastered some eighteen languages in moments spared from fitting horseshoes, should convince the most skeptical that minutes have value, and we all know what Gladstone thought of the thrift of time. Save the minutes and the hours will take care of themselves, we learned when too young to grasp the meaning.—Indianapolis News.

Women's Work in Homes

A survey of a group of women in cities of from 2,500 to 50,000 population showed that the average time was 51 hours a week, while in cities of 50,000 and upward the average was a little more than 48 hours. The farm women group averaged more than 62 hours a week, making the general average for all women observed slightly more than 51 hours a week.

Bird Lime Condemned

The biological survey says that it is very dangerous to use bird lime for catching birds, since harmless and innocent birds can be easily trapped in this way as well as harmful ones. In fact, it is against the law in most states to use bird lime for this purpose.

Thumbs Out When Ancient Man "Counted?"

The words for nine in many modern European languages are believed by H. Campbell, an antiquarian of the Mediterranean island of Cyprus, to indicate that the ancestors of European races must have been accustomed to count on the eight fingers of their two hands, excluding the thumb, instead of counting by tens or all the digits of both hands taken together, as the majority of anthropologists have assumed and as is the basis of the present decimal system.

Mr. Campbell's argument, suggested in a recent issue of the London publication, Notes and Queries, rests on the similarity of words in the various languages for "nine" and "new," suggesting, he believes, that a count of nine once began a new count of the eight fingers already counted just as the word "twenty" in English resembles "twice," and indicates that the ordinary decimal count of ten is to be duplicated.

In Latin, Mr. Campbell points out, "novem" means nine, while the closely similar word "novum" means new. In Greek the two words of the same meanings are "ennea" and "neu," respectively. In German they are "neun," "neu"; in Gaelic they are "noadh" and "ndah," and so on. The English word "nine" comes from the German, Mr. Campbell declares, while "new" is from the Scandinavian, yet both words are much alike.

It seems possible, he believes, that traces of the root word used for "two" in the various languages are to be found also in the equivalents of "ten," indicating that two fingers were to be counted after one full count of eight was over.—New York World.

DIET REQUIRES ABUNDANCE OF VITAMIN B

Several Common Sources of Vitamin B.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Our knowledge about vitamins has been undergoing constant expansion. It is still far from complete. First came recognition of the fact that in natural food materials there existed, in minute quantities, certain substances other than proteins, fats, carbohydrates and salts, which appeared to be essential for normal nutrition. Further investigation showed that these substances, or vitamins, also prevented various pathological conditions or "deficiency diseases." Early in the work these separate vitamins were identified, and called A, B and C. Each one had functions peculiar to itself. Several years later two more vitamins, D and E, were discovered. Comparatively recently it has been found that another vitamin, named G, occurs in a great many foods which are also rich in vitamin B. The identification of vitamin G was obscured for a long time because of this parallel occurrence.

The functions of the two vitamins differ. Vitamin B prevents beri-beri, while vitamin G prevents pellagra. An abundance of both vitamins is essential for growth and well-being at all ages, but particularly necessary for nursing mothers and young children. As both occur to a large extent in the same foods and in a very wide variety of foods, a varied diet containing fruits and vegetables will usually be satisfactory in respect to these two factors. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture suggests the following foods as good sources of vitamin B: Asparagus, beans, fresh and dried, brains, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, celery, cowpeas, egg yolk, fish roe, grapefruit, kidney, lemons, lentils, whole grain products, lettuce, liver, milk, nuts, okra, onions, oranges, parsley, parsnips, peas, potatoes, pineapples, rutabagas, spinach and other greens, tomatoes. With so long a list from which to choose, the diet may be pleasingly varied and yet always meet the requirements for an abundance of vitamin B.

WEARING A BELT MAKES BOY HAPPY

Little Fellows Not Particular About Make.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In the effort to do away with some of the usual complicated fastenings on small boys' suits, clothing specialists of the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture have eliminated several types of belts and are suggesting improvements in others. The belts that had to be put through a succession of loops around the waist, some of them out of reach in back, were especially aggravating. This type of belt had to be pulled out and put back whenever the trousers were unfastened.

Nevertheless, having a belt of some sort may be a very real pleasure to some small lads. They will not be very critical about the construction of it, just so it is a belt. The bureau has designed a very satisfactory and practical kind of belt that does not have to be released at all when the front drop is used. It is shown in the accompanying illustration.

The facing of the back is extended to the center front where it buttons securely, easily and attractively. Only one more button is needed than when the facing stops at the side plackets. When the side buttons are set forward no straps are needed for holding the belt in position.

In this style of trousers a front drop is formed by slashing each side of the front section to form slanting plackets. These openings are finished to simulate welt pockets and the buttons at the top of each can be buttoned without undoing the belt. This general type of trouser with a front drop has been found excellent for the child who is being trained to dress and undress himself. Clothing specialists recommend that only one style be used at first with buttons always in the same place, so that the child will learn to manipulate every button without aid. Later on variations and changes in style may be introduced. The blouse of this suit has a very simple one-button opening. The set-in sleeves clear the elbows and are loose enough to permit all normal activity. A flat collar facing and sleeve finish matches the trousers.

Prohibition of Colors in All Salad Dressings

The addition to mayonnaise, salad dressings, and similar products of a color which gives them the appearance of products with a higher egg content is prohibited by the federal food and drugs act, according to a recent announcement by the food, drug and insecticide administration of the United States Department of Agriculture. The notice to the trade says:

"Accompanying the increase in the commercial production of mayonnaise and like products there has developed a tendency toward the use of artificial color in such articles. The color most often used in mayonnaise or in salad dressings which resemble mayonnaise has the effect of giving to the article the appearance ordinarily resulting from the use of egg. The federal food and drugs act defines as adulterated an article of food which is colored in a manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed. The addition to mayonnaise, salad dressings, and like products of a color which imparts to the finished product the appearance of higher egg content than is actually present brings the product within the definition of adulteration and the declaration of added color on the label does not relieve the article from this prohibition of the law. This opinion applies whether the color be of coal-tar or of vegetable origin."

Scalloped Eggplant Is Something Very Recent

Here's an eggplant recipe from the bureau of home economics which may be new to those who have always fried this vegetable.

1 large eggplant	1 quart canned or chopped raw tomatoes
4 tbs. butter or other fat
1 green pepper, chopped	2 tsp. salt
	Pepper
1 small onion, chopped	1 cup bread crumbs

Pare the eggplant and cut it into small, even pieces. Melt 2 tablespoonfuls of the fat in a skillet, add the green pepper and onion, and cook for a few minutes. Add the tomatoes, eggplant, salt, and pepper, cook for ten minutes and place the mixture in a shallow greased baking dish. Melt the remaining fat in a skillet, stir in the bread crumbs, and sprinkle the crumbs over the eggplant. Bake in a moderate oven for 15 minutes, or until the eggplant is tender and the crumbs are browned.

Cracks in Floor Caused by Change in Moisture

Cracks in a new well-laid floor are the result of a change in moisture content within the wood itself. This change is due to improper preliminary seasoning; improper storage conditions at the mill or retail yard; delivery of the flooring during wet weather or before the masonry or plaster walls are dry; or it may be due to the absorption of moisture from the air within the building either before or after the flooring is laid. The use of the heating plant may be advisable, says the United States forest service, to maintain a temperature that will prevent excessive humidity in the building from the time the flooring is delivered until the house is occupied.

Eat Less Meat

Though practically the same amount of food is needed in summer and winter, the kind is somewhat different. Since meat and fish create body heat, it is wise to eat less meat in summer and to obtain the necessary amounts of protein from eggs, milk, cheese, vegetables and whole wheat products.

"Battle of Battling Orioles"

DURING the days when John McGraw, Hughey Jennings, Pat Tebeau, "Scrappy Bill" Joyce and many others of their type were in major league baseball the daily attraction was a double bill—a ball game and a fight.

A battle fought August 6, 1897, at Boston, is known as the "Battle of the Battling Orioles." This story should convince the fans of this docile age that baseball games played during the above mentioned period were anything but pink tea affairs.

In the eighth inning Umpire Lynch, enraged at the frequent tongue lashing and vile epithets Doyle had inflicted upon him, kept piling up the fines until $300 had been plastered all over the rioting Doyle, but this didn't stop that player, so Lynch, losing his temper entirely, planted a powerful blow on the massive jaw of Mr. Doyle and it started something, for instantly the ground in front of the grandstand became the scene of a fierce battle. Players of both teams swarmed into the thick of it; then the mob from the bleachers stepped in, all eager for a piece of the trouble.

Joe Corbett, brother of "Gentleman Jim," staggered out of the crowd and the thick of the battle with his arm hooked around the classic neck of Umpire Lynch, while the Baltimore players were swinging all kinds of uppercuts, haymakers and straight punches at the unfortunate umpire's face. Then the Boston players began punching the Baltimore crowd and it took a small army of cops fifteen minutes to stop the battle.

John McGraw.

In the ninth inning hostilities were renewed, when John McGraw, now manager and vice president of the New York Giants, knocked Fred Tenney, Boston's first baseman, down with a wicked right hook. Tenney jumped up and started after Mac who started for the clubhouse with all the players of both teams joining in the running battle.

The reserve police were called out who came to the park in double quick time and after a severe encounter succeeded in restoring order.

Luke Sewell Tells How He Broke Into Big Game

"I never caught over twenty games in my life before I went to the Cleveland team as a catcher," said Luke Sewell of Akron and famous Indian backstop, in a talk before the Men's club of the Kent (Ohio) Universalist church.

"We were playing in Birmingham and I was catching because the regular catcher had got hurt and they had called me in from shortstop to take his place. Pat Flaherty came to me that night and wanted to sign me as a catcher for the Cleveland club.

"'Why, I'm not a catcher, I'm just filling in. I've only caught two or three games,' I said, but he wouldn't listen to me.

"When we got back they sent me back to short. I got two or three letters from the Cleveland team and signed."

"Who was the hardest pitcher I ever caught?" he said in answer to a question. "Walter Mails was the hardest because he didn't know where they were going when he threw them. Catching Mails was just a diving game for me."

Baseball Mark Goes in Cardinal-Robin Battle

A modern major league record was broken and a National league record equaled in the second game of a recent bargain bill between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The new mark was set when the Cards and the Robins went to bat officially 103 times, the Dodgers with 52 and the Red Birds with 51. The all-time record was made June 9, 1883, when the Boston and Detroit Nationals batted 110 times, but the more recent record was 99 times between the New York Giants and the Cincinnati Reds on June 9, 1901.

The National record, which was equaled, was by the Red Birds employing 22 players, the same as was used by the Phillies against the Cards on September 16, 1926, and by the same club against the Dodgers, May 17, 1929.

Chet Wynne Was Fastest Notre Dame Grid Runner

Chet Wynne, who recently resigned as football coach of Creighton to take the job at Alabama, was one of the fastest halfbacks ever turned out on a Notre Dame team.

"Wynne probably is the fastest runner, next to Jack Elder, that ever came out of Notre Dame," writes Bill Hanna in the New York Herald Tribune. "I mean fastest football runner. He could skim an end remarkably fast and flit by like a wraith, just a rush of light—noiseless, then gone. Mahan moved with that same swift, graceful, lightfoot silence. There was more clatter to the running of Eckersall, Thorpe, Weekes, Barrett and Grange. Running in straight lines, Elder was more dangerous, it seemed to this onlooker, than Wynne in his noiseless arcs.

Jimmy McLarnin won his first fight at the age of twelve.

The batting sensation of the Coast league is Frank Crosetti, San Francisco shortstop.

Roger Peckinpaugh, Cleveland manager, says Jonah Goldman is the most amazing shortstop of the last 20 years.

The St. Paul American association baseball club has sold Bernie Tesmer, catcher, to the Dallas club of the Texas league.

J. D. E. Jones and Arnold Jones, national father and son tennis champions, are co-coaches of the Brown university varsity and freshmen tennis teams.

First Baseman Bernard Senne, who had a tryout with the Montreal Royals of the International league this spring, has been signed by the Peoria Tractors.

Only two players, John Booth and Capt. William Kenney, who were members of the Seattle Reds, baseball champions of the Northwest in 1886, are still alive.

Richard F. Hoyt, winner of the 1929 gold cup at Red Bank, N. J., again will depend on his boat Imp to retain the trophy. This year's race will be held August 16.

Several big league pitchers are hitting well over .300. Last year Uhle, Yde, Bayne and Ruffing in the American league, and Cvengros, Mays, Donohue, Brame and Scott in the National did it.

Our favorite name for a baseball catcher has been Grabowski—or possibly Heving of Boston—but we are weakening a little toward Gatherum, young backstop with the Buffalo Internationals.

Only three world's series have resulted in a clean sweep. The Braves accomplished this feat in 1914 over the Athletics and the Yankees in 1927 and 1928, against the Pirates and Cardinals, respectively.

Baseball is played in Sweden but the scoring rules differ from ours. "Fielders' choices" are scored as hits over there, sacrifice hits and flies are not recorded, catchers and pitchers are given errors on passed balls and wild pitches respectively.

Another Tom Oliver, who is not related to the Tom Oliver patrolling the outfield for the Boston Red Sox, will enter baseball at the close of the current semester of the University of Arkansas. Pitcher Tom Oliver, star of the Arkansas nine, has signed a contract with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Lew Krausse, seventeen-year-old Media, Pa., high school pitcher, may join the Philadelphia Athletics. His father, John Krausse, was once a professional pitcher, and his son's chief claim to fame is that he had hurled one no-hit and two one-hit games. The boy has been working out with the A's at Shibe park.

Manager Walter Johnson of Washington is elated over the recent showing of Max West and George Loepp, two of the younger outfielders, who have been hitting hard to help the Senators maintain their fine showing.

The New York Yankees have signed Infielder Tommy Byrne, semi-pro player, and have shipped him to their Chambersburg farm in the Blue Ridge league.

The New York Yankees have optioned Catcher Hank Karlon to Springfield of the Eastern league. He is still considered a good young prospect by Manager Shawkey.

Another Oglethorpe ball player has been attracted by a major league contract. Hot Holcomb, a pitcher, has signed a contract with the Boston Braves.

Pitcher Grunt Lucas, who attempted a comeback with Fort Wayne this year, has been released. While he did well in the first few games in which he played, he couldn't keep up his early slowing, so was turned loose.

FANS HAVE LITTLE USE FOR ARBITERS

President Heydler Says Umpires Have Few Friends.

After his many years in baseball, John A. Heydler, president of the National league, is convinced that players and fans have little use for the umpires. Heydler just about says so in his "special instructions" to the officials.

If there is any doubt about it, read as follows, and find out for yourself:

"Study the rules daily. A thorough knowledge of them is your greatest asset. Be courteous and firm and so compel respect from all, and never lose sight of the fact that friendship for the umpire, appreciation of his arduous duties, and practical co-operation in his troubles rarely extend outside of this office."

Another thing, Heydler likes umpires who are able to "stand on their own feet" and are not everlastingly appealing to a fellow mate to make the decision in some intricate play. He wants them to be in the right spot at the right time and get their own plays.

Fisherman and sportsmen generally will be interested in the announcement that the Anglers' club of Sarasota, Fla., will give $5,000 in cash prizes to anglers and guides for the best fish caught during the national tarpon tournament to be held there May 9 to July 15 inclusive. This is said to be the largest sum ever offered in a fishing tournament. These awards are in addition to cups, trophies, fishing tackle, etc., usually given at such an event.

Ed Barrow, business manager of the New York Yankees, has issued a warning to gamblers who make the stadium their headquarters while the Yankees are playing at home. "I am opening heavy fire on those who bet openly at the stadium on Sundays," said Barrow. "I have prepared warnings which will be handed to patrons, and I hope the fans do not take offense and will appreciate what I am trying to do. I have been fighting gamblers at ball parks ever since I came into the game, and I am never going to give it up. The situation at the stadium has become serious, and I am going to stamp out the evil."

Harry J. Rockafeller, graduate manager of athletics at Rutgers university, announces that Dennis Mulligan, captain of the West Point football team in 1923, has been appointed coach of the Rutgers freshman football eleven.

This gives the Rutgers' coaching staff two former West Point stars. Mulligan succeeds Don Storck, his teammate for four years on the army squad, who will be chief assistant to Head Coach Rockafeller next fall.

Another boost for the managerial ability of Donie Bush, leader of the White Sox, is the fine play of Bill Cissell, Sox shortstop, who is playing second base under the Bush regime. Cissell gives Bush credit. In 1928 Cissell was a widely heralded star of the Coast league, playing with Portland. Comiskey is said to have paid $123,000 for his release, $75,000 in cash and $48,000 in players.

"Bush has helped me immensely," says Cissell. "He has shown me several things that have been helpful to me, and I am playing with greater confidence than ever before. Bush is the greatest manager I've played under."

George Duncan, a gentleman who knows golf if anyone ever did, picks Hoylake as the hardest course in Great Britain. It is the No. 1 course on his list.

There is no watering system at Hoylake (watering systems being strange to nearly all British courses) and Hoylake often dries out. When the course is dry it is like cement. The greens turn light brown in color and become smooth as glass. A pitch shot is impossible; the player must run up the ball.

"Like the weather so Hoylake," they say over there and the American players who have tried Hoylake agree.

Cyril Tolley, British amateur golf champion, has filed his entry for the United States amateur championship tournament at Interlaches Country club, Minneapolis, Minn., July 10-12.

Tolley has played on five British Walker cup teams and twice won the British amateur crown, but never has played in the American amateur. He was defeated by Harrison R. Johnston, present United States amateur champion, in the Walker cup singles at Sandwich recently.

FATHER

By EVERETT HOLLINGWORTH

From Los Angeles Herald—June 18, 1927.

Give a thought to father, toiling all the day;
His the bounden duty endless bills to pay;
His to keep his loved ones fed, and clothed,
and warm;
His to guard their welfare, shield them from all harm.

Give a thought to father; whether sun or rain,
Whether heat or cold, to him the way is plain.
He has cherished mother, treasured all the kids—
Sad, not angry, when they don't do what he bids.

Give a thought to father; he thinks much for you.
From that anxious moment when first breath
you drew,
Through long nights and mornings, his the care
sublime
That has bought your victuals to the present time.

Give a thought to father; never gold he asks,
But a sympathetic sharing of his tasks.
Love and kindly actions adequately pay.
Any worth-while father—give him them, I pray.

Give a thought to father while you have him still—
Soon he'll sleep in silence on yon lonely hill;
Soon his sacrificial life for you will end;
Then, ah, then you'll know you've lost your staunchest friend!

Menlo Park

Full Membership Attends City Council Meeting Tuesday

The city council met Tuesday in regular session there being a full membership present.

The executive committee of the Menlo Park Citizens League submitted a long comumnication approving of the council's attitude in increasing the tax rate of 50 cents to $1 on the $100 property valuation.

The committee presents the following estimate of expenses and revenues for the ensuing fiscal year:

Police department, police judge, salaries and expenses, $7,500; other salaries, attorney, clerk, treasurer, $1,680; highway street lighting, $1,080; rent, light, telephone, supplies, janitor, etc., $1,164; contingencies and miscellaneous, $600. Total annual expense, $12,024.

From taxes, present 50-cent rate, $4,180; from busines licenses, $3,200; from court fines, other than traffic $4,180; from business licenses, $3,200; from rent of space for library, $120; Total anual receipts, $8,460.

Deficit, $3,564.

"To meet the above deficit that plan proposed is to double the money secured from city taxes; in other words, to add $4,180 to the geenral fund through increasing the present city tax of 50 cents to a rate of $1.00.

"It is not proposed to increase the total city expenditures over previous years; an actual decrease instead is proposed in the above table; nor is it proposed to add one single new employe, position or salary to the city budget.

"At the present time our city taxes are assessed and collected by San Mateo county at the same time the county collects its own tax and the fire, lighting, sanitary and other district taxes—and it is proposed to cotninue this method without change at the present time

"The present combined tax rate you pay, which rate includes all of the above named taxes, is $5.86 per $100 of your assessed valuation. Of this, $5.86 only 50 cents, or 8½ per cent, goes to the city of Menlo Park. Increasing our city tax rate to $1 will therefore increase your total tax bill but a small percentage. For example: If your present assessed valuation is $600, your total tax bill is $35.16 of which only $3 goes to the city of Menlo Park. If the city rate is now increased to $1, your total bill will be but $38.16, of which $6 will go to the city of Menlo Park.

"For all practical purposes our city has operated over since incorporation at a deficit to its general fund. Our former city administrations have never met this issue fairly and squarely. It has been their policy to "borrow" from our road fund to meet these deficits—to rob Peter to pay Paul—to put off the day of reckoning, and to depend in part on the uncertain revenues which might be derived from liquor and similar fines, with the result that our city streets, which should have been repaired and maintained from our road fund, are now in many sections of the city in a most deplorable condition. We are nearly three years behind with these repairs as the result and our streets must now have immediate attention. Whatever money is secured to the road fund from fines for traffic violations must now be held intact in that fund and then used where it legally and of necessity should be used."

The communication was ordered filed. The phrase "A charter government" appearing in the preamble of the letter was objected to by E. E. Quayle but the objection was overruled by the chairman. Mr. Quayle then began a lengthy address concerning the council's plan of increasing the tax rate but had not proceeded far when the mayor called him to order, declaring that the subject of taxation was not before the council. Quayle maintained that he was within his rights to discuss the question.

Blake presented an unsigned letter attacking the proposed incerase in taxation. The letter contended that the old rate could be sustained if proper business methods were used. The communication was ordered filed.

Commissioner Crane read the report of Chief of Police Love which showed that $56590 had been collected for licenses, dog licenses $6, motor vehicle violations $463.50. Other violations $37, toal $1072.40. Dring the month 102 arrests were made.

Building inspector Weeden reported that $18 were received from building permits, $12.80 electric permits and plumbing permits $22—total $52.80.

E. M. Rankin, W. E. Monroe and Frank Becker presented rates for insurance on the city's car. All three were requested to meet with the council on Thursday evening to arrange for the award of the insurance.

Henry Carroll, owner of a grocery in Stanford Park, called the attention of the council to the hideous bill board signs on the highway. Carroll thought it was an opportune time for the council to take some action in getting rid of these signs. The matter was refered to City Attorney Whitworth to frame an ordinance. The attorney could see no way to prevent these signs displayed on private property. He would do what he could in the matter.

The application of Bert J. Mehl, 535 Geneve street, San Francisco for city engineer, was read and filed.

The council adjourned to meet Thursday eevning.

Faster service to
Chicago and the Northwest
Effective June 15

Leading the way in a sweeping time cut throughout the Southern Pacific system, the fast schedules of Southern Pacific's Overland Route trains will be again reduced.

Westbound schedule was cut from 58 to 56 hours on June 1. This fourth time cut since 1926 makes a total reduction of 10 hours, 50 minutes, eastbound; 12 hours westbound.

A new service on the "San Francisco Limited" saves nearly 7 hours from San Francisco to St. Louis. "Gold Coast" will be 2 hours faster to Kansas City, St. Louis and Chicago. These trains will now be faster by hours than any train on any other line, San Francisco to St. Louis.

"Cascade" of Shasta Route will be 15 minutes faster, San Francisco to Portland; "Shasta" 40 minutes faster; "Klamath" 20 minutes faster.

Every day until Sept. 30, Southern Pacific offers reduced summer roundtrips to the East; return limit Oct. 31.

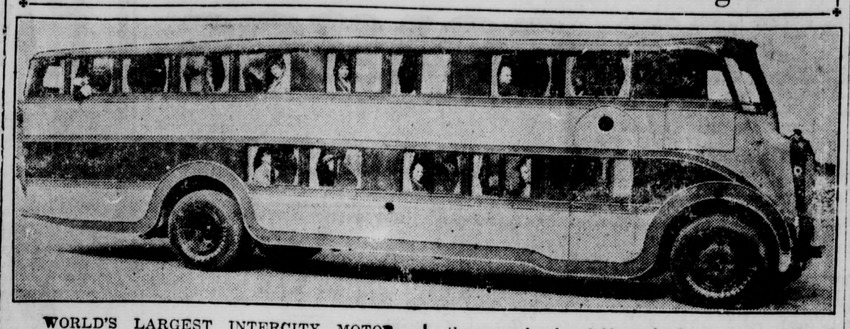
New Highway Leviathan Carries 53 Passengers



WORLD'S LARGEST INTERCITY MOTOR-COACH will be placed in service by Pacific Greyhound Lines between San Francisco and San Jose. The Duplex day coach derives its name from the fact that seats are arranged on two levels; 35 on the upper level and 18 on the lower. It is equipped with large interior baggage compartments, lavatory, and with portable tables for dining and card playing. The Duplex is of all metal construction with shatter-proof glass, emergency exits and air brakes as added safety features.

Motorcoach commuters between San Francisco and San Jose were given the privilege of trying out a new type of motor coach when the Duplex, a 53-passenger day coach, was placed in service by Pacific Greyhound Lines this week.

This leviathan of the highways represents revolutionary ideas in motorcoach construction, according to L. D. Jones, general manager of Pacific Greyhound Lines.

It is designed to carry passengers on two levels. Seats reached by walking along a central aisle and taking a step down into the lower compartment or a step up into seats on the higher level.

Of the 53 seats, 18 are placed on the lower level and 35 on the upper level. Only 16 seats face to the rear of the motocoach, the other 37 face forward.

Seats are individual reclining chairs with the exception of the rear lounge, seating five passengers, two observation seats in the driver's compartment and one double folding seat in the vestibule.

The braking system is unusual in that three separate air reservoirs are employed to supply three distinct braking systems, according to Jones. Shatter proof glass in the large observation windows is an added safety feature.

The Duplex is constructed entirely of metal A completely equipped lavatory with hot and cold running water is another feature of the coach, according to Jones.

NEW RAMON NOVARRO FILM SPANISH ATMOSPHERE IN

"In Gay Madrid" Gives Star Opportunity to Sing And Tango

Ramon Novarro will make his second all-talking and singing screen appearance next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at the Sequoia Theatre in "In Gay Madrid," a romance based on the Spanish classic, "La Casa de la Troya," written by Alejandro Perez Lugin The work was adapted for the screen by Bess Meredyth, Salisbury Field and Edwin Justus Mayer, who also were responsible for dialogue and continuity. Robert Z. Leonard directed.

Dorothy Jordan, first seen with Novarro in "Devil May Care," will again play opposite the star and the supporting cast includes Lottice Howell, Beryl Mercer, Claude King, Eugenia Besserer, William V. Mong, David Scott, Herbert Clark, Nanci Price, George Chandler, Bruce Coleman and Nicholas Caruso.

Six Songs Featured

Information is that Novarro having overwhelmingly proved himself a drawing-card as a singer of the intimate type in both "The Pagan" and "Devil May Care", Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer made much of the musical possibilities of his latest vehicle, engaging no less than five composers and lyricists to write the musical numbers and including as a feature of the picture a male chorus of fifty trained voices The songs include "Santiago," "Let Me Give You Love" and "Dark Night" written by Xavier Cugat, Spanish musician and orchestra leader in collaboration with Herbert Stothart and Clifford Grey, and "Smile Comrades!" "Into My Heart" and "Wine, Woman and Song" by Roy Turk and Fred E. Ahlert.

It is reported that considerable attention has been paid to the dancing features of the production, several of the scenes offering an opportunity for the exhibition of traditional Spanish dances Novarro, whose ability as a dancer was instrumental in drawing him into the limelight in his early picture career, will do a tango with Lottice Howell An interesting item in this connection was the importation from Spain of Margarita Bolado, 12-year-old Spanish fandango exponent, to superintend the tango numbers in which groups participate Miss Bolado, the youngest technical director in the film industry, is said to have been not at all perturbed at her youth. Interviewed when she first arived from Seville, the dance expert said: "In Spain I have big classes. It is nothing unusual there."

The Boosters Committee of Bay View Lodge of Odd Fellows will hold another of its popular dances Saturday evening at the Odd Fellows' hall. As is usual on these occasions, music will be furnished by O'Connor's orchestra. The admission will be gents 50 cents and ladies 25 cents.

Honest

There is at least one clerk in the income tax department who has a sense of humor. He had been going through a pile of returns when he suddenly waved one in the air and shouted:

"Hold everything, folks, at last we've discovered a really honest man."

"Go on, tell us!" cried every one with manifest disbelief.

"Well," said the Columbus of the office, "here's a movie executive who has classified his salary as 'unearned income.'"

Girl Slain to Appease Ghost

Las Palmas, Canary Islands.—A weird tragedy of peasant superstition that led to a human sacrifice has just been uncovered near the little village of Teide on the island of Teneriffe. Back in the hills from Teide in a wretched hut lived a family named Valido, consisting of six—the mother, the father, three daughters, and a ghost—the spirit of a twenty-two-year-old youth, Fernando, who had died a year before.

All members belonged to a cult, described as a mixture of primitive Christianity, spiritualism, and age-old superstition that had lingered in the mountains of Spain from prehistoric days and been brought over to the islands by the early settlers.

This background explains, in part, why the dead Fernando was not only a real member of the family but also its most important member. Every day, by means of magic ritual, living members of the family claimed they would enter into conversation with Fernando's ghost and he would describe to them the wonder and horrors of the world in which he lived and where one day they would go.

One night, the story goes, the ghost appeared and said that there was only one way in which he could be released from the place of shadows and fear in which he was wandering.

One of his sisters would have to be sacrificed to appease the spirits who ruled over the other world. The next morning the three sisters—Calendaria, Amelia and Carmen—drew lots to see which one would die to release the spirit of their brother from torment. It fell to the youngest, Calendaria, sixteen.

Calendaria accepted her fate without a murmur. Her parents and two sisters stripped her naked and tied her on a bed. With a knout, made of heavy knotted ropes, they began to beat her.

Each member of the family in turn took the lash and beat the girl while the others knelt in a corner and chanted mystic incantations. From time to time they would stop and ask the girl if she was ready to join her brother. Each time Calendaria would answer, "Not yet; keep on." After six hours of beating she died.

A few days later, when one of the surviving sisters went to the village she told the story, relating that now her brother's spirit was at peace. The tale came to the ears of the police, who arrested the entire family. All of them confessed the crime and explained in detail the ceremony of the human sacrifice.

The Singing Master

Hungarian Laughs at Insomnia

Trenton, N. J.—Here is the story of a man, who for seventy-eight years, has stared with sleepless eyes at a changing world.

The astounding case of Albert E. Herpin, which baffled physicians thirty years ago, comes to light again now with the claim of a Hungarian war veteran that he has not slept in fifteen years.

For Herpin, hale and hearty, says he has not closed his eyes in sleep during his 78 years of life, and there is none to disprove it.

He has sat through the long night hours, erect in his chair, devouring the day's news to help while away the time others reposed in slumber.

Physicians who attempted to solve his case, shrugged their shoulders resignedly after keeping him under observation for years. It was too much for them.

He rests, he says, while his eyes are never closed, he relaxes in his sitting position and gains at least physical respite from his labors of the day.

But his mind is never at rest. He has never known the oblivion of sleep. Through the long round of hours each day, his conscious mind is alert.

An omnivorous reader of news (Herpin detests fiction), he is almost an encyclopedia of important events during the last sixty years. Seven newspapers each night cover his rest period.

He does not just scan headlines. Column by column he pores over the events of the day down to the smallest paragraphs, digesting the news as he goes.

Herpin is as much at a loss to account for his strange condition as physicians.

He does not deplore his lot. His few attempts to sleep have succeeded only in irritating him. To close his eyes brings not relaxation, but nervousness.

Aside from his sleeplessness, Herpin leads a very normal existence. He earns his livelihood as caretaker in homes of the exclusive Perdicaris Place section of Trenton.

"I'm not a crank," he says laughingly, "I like to enjoy myself in my own way. I smoke at night, lots of it. I'm a teetoler, but I'm against prohibition."

THINGS TO DO

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I knew Stephens for more than forty years, and the longer I knew him the more I marveled at the varied interests he had developed and the amount he was accomplishing. At eighty he was launching into a half dozen new investigations which would require a dozen years to bring to a successful conclusion. He went at his work like a boy of twenty—with force, enthusiasm, determination, and the keenest interest.

He read omnivorously. Every leisure moment of his seemed to be taken up with some new volume or other in which he had found interest.

"Have you read this history of Chicago?" he asked me when I was calling on him.

"It's tremendously interesting. Take it home and look it over."

History, science, philosophy, biography, fiction—it made no difference what the subject was—he found something to engage his attention, something to stimulate his mind, something to widen his sympathies and his interests.

He was a fluent writer, also. Very few months passed without something coming from his pen—a new scientific theory advanced, the result of an investigation, or the discussion of a topic which was of general interest to the community or to the state. Most men would have been satisfied to pursue one line of scientific investigation and carry it to its conclusion. He had a dozen and was considered authority in any one of them. He was interested in birds and knew more about them than any one I have ever known; he liked gardening and, long after most men have given up active life, he was planning a formal garden in his back yard and selecting trees and shrubs which it would take twenty years to bring to perfection.

He knew a half dozen languages and could read fluently in any one of them, and speak, too. He never lacked for something to do. He never grew old. I saw him in his last illness—eighty-six he was—but he still had the enthusiasms of a boy.

"I don't see what they are keeping me here for," he complained to me. "I think I am all right, and besides I have so many things that I ought to be doing, and if I don't get at them soon, I may fail to finish them.

He never finished the tasks, but until almost the last moment of his long and useful life the day held for him a score of tasks which he was eager to get at, pleasures yet untasted, enjoyments which had not lost their attraction. If he had lived to be a hundred there would have been for him always something worth while to do.

Martin retired at fifty—bored with his work, tired of the monotony of life, not able to find anything interesting in his work, or worth giving his attention to. He didn't care for reading, he had no interest in sports or music or the drama, nor did he find enjoyment in association with his neighbors. There just wasn't anything to do, and he died before sixty from sheer lack of interest in anything. Nothing to do.

Goldendale, Wash.—Farmers in a large area of this part of the state appear to be carrying canes, walking leisurely around the rolling hills. They are searching for poisoned alfalfa leaves, coated with strychnine and scattered last winter to kill jack rabbits under the direction of the biological survey.

The deadly leaves must be removed from free range land before sheep are permitted on summer pasture. Each stick bears a sharpened nail point to aid in gathering the small baits.

Royal Secrets Closely Guarded

London.—Of all the great collections of historical documents to be found in the scores of museums and libraries of England, the most secretly kept and the most jealously guarded are the king's archives in Windsor castle.

All that the outside world actually knows about this valuable collection is that it is kept in a strong room in the great round tower of the ancient castle and that only the members of the royal family and the recorder of the king's archives are permitted to examine the papers.

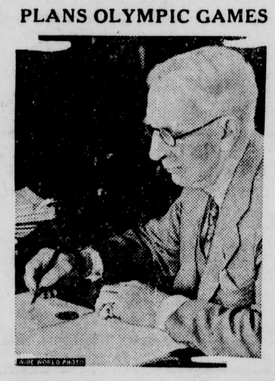
The archives are the private property of the sovereign and the state can claim no ownership or supervision. They consist of documents dealing with the royal family during the last several centuries.

The archives are singularly rich in papers dealing with the Stuart family and largely concern the pretender to the Stuart throne after the fall of the last Stuart monarch.

Other documents deal with King George III and his movements, with George IV and with various ministers of state. Most of the latter are of a highly secret nature and are in script.

There also is a large collection of Victorian papers from the time of Lord Melbourne, who was Queen Victoria's first prime minister. There are documents in the collection from all parts of the world, from sovereigns, presidents, ministers of state and ambassadors. The archives may not become public property until the royal family is extinct.

PLANS OLYMPIC GAMES



Carrying America's complete plans for the Olympic games to be held at Los Angeles in 1932, William May Garland, president of the Tenth Olympiad committee, has left Los Angeles for Berlin to submit the schedules to the Olympic congress at Berlin. Preparations have progressed so satisfactorily at Los Angeles that the games could be held and the spectators accommodated in six months.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Sun's Gravity Greater Than Earth's

The gravity of the sun is far greater than that of the earth. Scientists claim that a person weighing 150 pounds on the earth would weigh nearly two tons on the sun. A weight is attracted to the earth at the rate of 16.08 feet for the first second, whereas on the sun the rate would be 444 feet for the first second.

Cement Worker, 84, Casts Stone for His Own Grave

Streetsville, Ont.—Robert Bond, eighty-four-year-old cement block manufacturer, is ready for the end of his days, having completed a large concrete tombstone which is to cover his mother's grave and his own after his death. Only one thing bothers Bond now. That is the question of whose hand shall carve in the stone the date of his death.

Bond, who has worked with cement for thirty years, experimented until he discovered the mixture which would give him precisely the right texture for his tombstone. The completed stone bears a polish similar to that of granite. In the face of the stone the octogenarian has inserted his mother's name, her birth date and the date of her death, and his own name and date of birth in leaded letters. A space is left blank for the insertion of the date of his own death.

German Returns Spoils of War to French Soldier

Paris.—In 1915 Victor Martin was wounded in the trenches and captured by the Germans. On his way to a prison camp all of his belongings, including his pocketbook, were stolen by a German soldier. Recently M. Martin received a package with a German postmark containing his pocketbook. A note signed by Franz Piter of Brandenburg explained that the sender had a troubled conscience, and after thinking it over for 15 years had decided to return the property.

Idea of Profit-Sharing Put on Business Basis

Bruce Grey, the noted political economist of San Francisco, said in an argument about the recognition of Russia:

"Lenin and his gang promised the proletariat a new heaven and a new earth. What they have given the proletariat is a new hell.

"It reminds me of the manufacturer who called in the foremen of his factory and said:

"'Boys, I want to keep up with the philanthropic movements of the day, so accordingly I'm going to establish a profit-sharing system here. I now put all hands from the first of the year on a profit-sharing basis.'

"The foremen beamed. One of them said:

"'What are our profits so far, boss?'

"'No profits, George,' said the manufacturer in a pleasant voice. 'No profits, but a loss of $30,000. The men's share is a 15 per cent wage reduction. Tell 'em to expect it in their envelopes next pay-day.'" —Detroit Free Press.

Corn Borer

The corn borer is one of the most serious pests of the farm. It enters the cornstalk at the ground and operates through the length of the stalk and ultimately the corn is destroyed. A. Russell Marston, entomologist at the Michigan State college corn borer experiment station, has developed a strain of corn which the borer refuses to attack. Why, Marston cannot tell. There is something in it the borer does not like; he knows the grain intuitively, and lets it alone. The resistant strain that has been developed is a cross between the maize abargo, a South American strain the borer will not attack, and a commercially productive North American strain.

FAMILY DOCTOR MADE MILLIONS OF FRIENDS

Fifteen years after his graduation, Dr. Caldwell became famous for a single prescription which now, after forty years, is still making friends.

Today Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the world's most popular laxative. Millions of people never think of using anything else when they're constipated, headachy, bilious, feverish or weak; when breath is bad, tongue coated, or they're suffering from nausea, gas, or lack of appetite or energy.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is made today according to the original formula, from herbs and other pure ingredients. It is pleasant-tasting; thorough in the most obstinate cases; gently effective for women and children. Above all, it represents a doctor's choice of what is safe for the bowels.

Londoner, 88, Broadcasts

London is claiming that Sir Alfred Yarrow, who recently broadcast over the radio, is the oldest man to talk through a microphone. Sir Alfred, who is eighty-eight, and famous as a shipbuilder, is being congratulated on his speech. He is one of England's most active men and takes his outings in an open victoria drawn by a prancing horse.

Society

A typical outdoor California wedding took place Wednesday after noon at four-thirty o'clock, when Miss Frances Irene Gunther was married to Mr. Walter Thompson Kellogg, Jr. The garden of the Gunther home on Grand street was the setting for the nuptials. Before a background of beautiful shrubs and with great urns of vari colored flowers at either side, the ceremony took place, with Reverend Clarence H. Stevens of the First Congregational Church officiating.

Mr. William Boos, brother-in-law of the bride, sang "At Dawning," and Mrs. A. Peterson of Palo Alto, sang "I Love You Truly." Then to the familar strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Mrs. Earl Higgins, the bridal party entered the garden, led by Mr. William Kellogg and Mr. Terry Foster Kellogg, brothers of Mr. Kellogg. Then came Mrs. William Boos, sister of the bride, as matron of honor. Mrs. Boos wore a very beautiful deep rose georgette gown and carried a sheaf of pastel shaded sweet peas.

She was followed by the bride, on the arm of her father, Mr. George A Gunther, who gave his daughter into the keeping of the groom. Mrs. Kellogg was a radiantly lovely bride, wearing a long pale pink georgette afternoon gown and carrying a sheaf of deeper pink roses tied with wide streamers of pink satin ribbon.

Mr. Kellogg was attended by his brother, Mr. Jack Kellogg.

Other one hundred and seventy-five friends and relatives congratulated the happy young couple who later slipped away for a short honeymoon trip.

Mrs. George Gunther, the mother of the bride, wore a very attractive gown of pink and white silk and Mrs. Walter T. Kellogg, the groom's mother, wore a modish ensemble of blue and tan chiffon.

On their return Mr and Mrs. Kellogg will be at home to their friends at the Gerwin Apartments on Brewster avenue.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Gunther of 147 Grand street and is popular among the younger social set. Mr. Kellogg is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Kellogg of 150 Jeter street and is a prominent member of the De Molays and the Yomecans service club. He is connected with the Standard Oil Company in San Francisco. Both young people are graduates of the Sequoia Union High School.

Professor and Mrs Stanley Smith and four children of Finger avenue are leaving next Wednesday for Europe, where they plan to remain for a year and a half The family will go first to Los Angeles for a few days' visit and then on to Houston, Texas, from where they will sail on the French liner, "Cuba" for La Havre, France Mr. Smith, who is professor of Romanic languages at Stanford University, will take some advanced courses in France and the three boys will be placed in one of the French schools. The family expects to return home about January 1, 1932.

Mrs. Maud Hayward of Pasadena is visiting at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. S. Kalenborn and will spend the summer here. She came up in time to attend the graduation of her grandson, Frederick Kalenborn.

Mrs. Inez Felton leaves Saturday for Richardson Springs to spent the summer.
